Death Metal in between brutality and melancholy

Nearly four years after the last album from the remarkable THIRDMOON, around mastermind Wolfgang Rothbauer (also IN SLUMBER, EISBLUT), the Austrian / French quintet comes back with "Dimorphic Cynosure". Even ten years since their debut release, this fifth studio album shows that the band from Linz is just not ready to retire yet, but is hungrier than ever before. Thereby, "Dimorphic Cynosure" is the most aggressive but also most melancholic THIRDMOON album. Wolfgang Rothbauer himself calls it lyrically and musically the most emotional release of his previous creative period.

In order to reappear properly after a not always voluntary break of creativity, the album will not only be available as a standard JewelCase, but also as a limited DigiPak version with four bonus tracks, where three of them originated spontaneously during the recording of the album, reflecting the emotional condition during the time of recording quite sentimentally and honestly.

With "Dimorphic Cynosure" the band now has the potential to be catapulted to where vehement followers see them for a long time: ahead of the European Melodic Death / Black Metal! In spite of groove and brutality, THIRDMOON don't do without their ever since well-known catchy melodies and emotional acoustic parts.

"Dimorphic Cynosure" is more than just an album. It is the loud and bloodcurdling sign of life from a band - forgotten by many, but which never gave up despite several circumstances over the past years. There is no more impressive comeback.

Recorded at the Soundspur Studio in Garsten and mastered by Peter "Pluto" Neuber / Mega Wimp Sound (WAR FROM A HARLOTS MOUTH, AVULSED, NECROPHOBIC) in Berlin, this production also leaves nothing to be desired and makes - with an extraordinary and stunning artwork - this release a class of its own, which shouldn't be missing in any CD collection.
